Mercy Home team ‘doing everything they can’ during national emergency

Preliminary results of surprise state inspection finds nursing home in compliance with COVID-19 Infection Control regulations

EAGLE LAKE, Maine (Jan. 6, 2021) – Preliminary results of an unannounced State of Maine audit of Mercy Home yesterday found the nursing home facility in compliance with COVID-19 Infection Control regulations.

Though unannounced, these types of audits, also known as “surveys,” are not uncommon at nursing homes and other licensed facilities. The inspector observes Infection Control practices, such as hand hygiene, proper use and discarding of PPE, proper cleansing of medical equipment, proper signage, etc. He or she may also perform interviews, such as checking for knowledge of policies and procedures.

“I am proud of our efforts to keep everyone as safe as humanly possible,” said Northern Maine General CEO Michelle Raymond, “especially the efforts of the Mercy Home team who are working tirelessly to protect our residents, most of them elderly, and to protect each other. They are heroic, and they really are doing everything they can.”

All measures to keep residents and employees as safe as possible from the deadly, novel coronavirus continue at Mercy Home and at all NMG homes and offices.
